The book and ladder wagon answered the call, but the services of the firemen were not needed, as the cause of the scare had been learned upon their arrival. In the basement of the E. A. Prindle hardware store, adjoining a rubbish fire had been built in the furnace. Through a disconnected register, the basement of the drug store was enveloped in smoke, causing the occupants above to think that there was a fire somewhere. A $15,000 SUIT.

Springfield Electric Railway Defendant As Result of Accident.

Springfield, July 22.—A suit for $15,000 has been brought in the Windsor county court by Harriet E. MacCarthy, administratrix of the estate of Benjamin S. MacCarthy, against the Springfield Electric Railway Co. Papers have been served on the company by Constable Frank G. Gill. The suit is the outcome of an accident which occurred two years ago, when the midnight car, on the return trip from Charlestown, ran over and killed Mr. MacCarthy at the foot of Mineral street. The car was in charge of Conductor H. M. Dressel and Motorman F. E. Coombs. No arrests were made at the time of the accident, as the authorities considered that no blame could be attached to Mr. Coombs, who had done all in his power to stop the car after seeing Mr. MacCarthy lying on the tracks.

The case is returnable at the December term of the Windsor county court.

AN EARTHQUAKE IN CHILE

In Which the Limitations of the Native Servant Were Shown.

"The South American servant is usually most considerate of your comfort, but he is not apt to use his brain very much," said John H. Gilmore, an American, who has passed most of his life below the equator. "During the earthquake in Santiago de Chile in 1906 my cook refused to go upstairs to help me save some clothes and valuables, but unthinkingly risked his life to get me a bottle of whiskey."

"I was at the Union club early in the evening of Aug. 16, and some of us were shaking dice for drinks. When the first shock came I, not being used to earthquakes, ran out into the patio. My companions leered me when I went back to the table. We got busy with the dice again, and pretty soon came the grand shock, that lasted three minutes and forty-seven seconds. There was no jarring this time, but everybody made for the front door."

"My house was about five blocks from the club, but all the lights were out, the streets were pitch dark, and it seemed as though I had been blindfolded. I was running as hard as I could. There was a light in the dining room, and everything was on the floor. I shouted for my wife, but she, the servants and the dog were gone."

"While I was turning off the gas, Antonio, our cook, who was an Araucanian Indian, came to the front door."

"Master, for God's sake get out," she cried.

"She told me that my wife had gone to the Alameda, a wide street some distance away, and would wait for me there."

"It was midwinter and bitterly cold."

I ran into the house again and upstairs to get some wraps, and begged Antonio to come with me to help find them and some valuables, but she would not. She ran to the kitchen and fetched a candle and then caught the thing, as I threw them into the patio. When I got downstairs she had made them all up into a bundle.

"I put on a heavy overcoat, and we started for the Alameda. As I ran I felt something bumping against my legs. I reached into my pocket and drew out a bottle of whiskey. Antonio, though she would not go upstairs, which was fairly safe, had ducked into the bodega or wine closet, the most dangerous sort of place in an earthquake, and dug out the whiskey."

"Everybody in the city who could get there was in the Alameda, and there was such a throng that I could not find my wife. We searched about the spot where Antonio had left her, but there was not a sign."

"We walked about calling her name, but it was not until two o'clock in the morning that we found her. Then it was by our little fox terrier's recognizing my voice, and coming and leaping toward me. I found my wife and the other servant sitting on the curb near by. We commandeered a vacant carriage, and my wife and I lived in it for two nights.—New York Sun.
